MEAL-PREPPING

ESSENTIALS

Feeling overwhelmed with what to cook for dinner and how to ensure it's healthy for you and your family? The best way to meet your healthy eating goals is to up your game in meal planning and prepping. Get organised and reduce your stress levels at meal times.

Here are our top tips to keep you on track.

1. WHAT IS ON YOUR MEAL PLAN?

This is the critical first step to meal prepping – what are you planning on cooking? Sounds simple. It is, so it's important to do it. Skipping this step will not help you reach your healthy-eating goals. The Healthy Mommy App makes it so easy for you to customize your weekly meal plans, choose from hundreds of delicious, easy-to-prepare recipes and make your weekly meal plan suit you and your family, your budget and your time commitments.

2. DESIGNATE MEAL PREP DAYS

This is important not only from a sanity perspective but also from a food safety perspective. If you cook chicken on a Sunday and store it properly in the fridge, it will most probably keep until Wednesday. Therefore, it wouldn't be wise to cook all of the chicken on Sunday for a Friday-night meal.

Once you know when you would like to eat each meal, you can designate the days of meal prepping. Generally, it's great to try to set aside a couple of hours aside on a Sunday for these tasks, and once again midweek.

Take a look at the food storage info in this guide so you know how long different foods can be kept for.

3. THINK SIMPLE

You don't have to create involved, detailed meals. Healthy eating can be as simple as a salad or veggies and some grilled meat on the barbeque. Choose lean meats that can be grilled quickly and pair with one of the healthy and simple salads from the 28 Day Weight Loss Challenge for a speedy, nutritious meal.

Find out how the Healthy Mommy App can be your ultimate meal prep companion on Page 10

4. INCLUDE DIFFERENT COOKING METHODS DURING MEAL PREP TIME

This is so you can divide and conquer your meal prepping. For instance, if all of your meals are 15-minute salads, you're not able to prep as much as if you have two salads, two slow-cooked meals and one oven-baked meal. While you're prepping the salad meals, you can have one of the slow-cooker meals on in the background and one of the meals in the oven. Use your time efficiently.

5. PREP INGREDIENTS AS WELL AS FULL MEALS

Sometimes you won't have time to prepare full meals during your allocated prep sessions. If that's the case, pull out certain ingredients that you can prepare in advance. Spend some time:

- cooking chicken or meats
- making sauces or dressings
- roasting vegetables
- slicing vegetables for snacks or salads
- preparing rice, quinoa and pasta

6. PREP MORE THAN JUST DINNER

We often think about preparing dinner as our focus, but you can and should include preparation of other meals and snacks for those days you know you'll be extra busy or it will be difficult for you to access healthy foods. By preparing breakfasts, lunches and snacks as well as dinner, you will have a better chance of eating well and sticking ingredients in zip-lock bags to whizz up first thing in the morning for breakfast or having chopped carrots on hand for snack time.

7. MAKE SHOPPING EASY

From a food shopping perspective, think about ways to make this really easy for you. Can you use the services of an online shopping delivery service? Most of the large supermarkets offer this service as well as local fruit and veg shops and even the butcher. If not, plan which day of the week you will do your main shop and schedule in another time midweek to pick up some extra fresh produce for your end-of-the-week meals.

ESSENTIALS

The Healthy Mommy App creates shopping lists to suit your customized meal plans. Grocery shopping is an important part of the preparation, to ensure the healthy foods you need for your meal plans are available for you to prepare and eat. Make it as easy as possible.

8. LABEL WHAT YOU'VE PREPARED

Once you've become a meal-prepping pro and your fridge and freezer start to fill up with all the goodies you've made, ensure you label your containers with what is inside, when it was cooked and when it should be eaten by. This will help you keep track of what you have available and avoid any food waste. There are lots of labelling products available these days... or go lo-fi by writing your labels on paper and sticky-taping them on the containers.

9. MEAL PREP SUMMARY

Once you've prepared all the components for your meals, write a list of what you have available and which meals they are to be used in. For example, if you have cooked some boneless, skinless chicken breast on a Sunday, list which recipes to use these in from Sunday to Wednesday. Then each day when you are assembling your meals you know what you have available and what needs to be used up to avoid food waste.

10. OUTSOURCE

Get help with your meal prepping or make meals in bulk to swap with a friend or neighbor, eg. you make double the pasta sauce to give your friend half and they give you a frittata they've made extra of. Get your partner and kids involved, too. Encouraging children to help with meal prep is fun for them but also wonderfully rewarding and helpful in teaching and raising children who can look after themselves and appreciate healthy foods. Even if it is as simple as washing the salad leaves or shelling the peas, get everyone involved.

KEY EQUIPMENT

☛ To ensure meal prepping is easy and saves you lots of time, start by sorting out your kitchen. You can't possibly expect to prepare a quick, healthy meal if you need to spend 15 minutes looking for a saucepan.

☛ Sort out the cupboards and drawers well in advance so that you know where all your utensils and equipment are – and be sure to put them back in the same place, too.

☛ When you're about to start your meal prep, get out all the equipment and utensils you'll need beforehand.

Key meal-prepping equipment include:

|  |                    |   |
|--|--------------------|---|
|     | Food processor     | It doesn't have to be an expensive one but they do make dicing and slicing veggies and other ingredients a lot faster, rather than chopping everything by hand.   |
|    | Blender            | Whether it's a benchtop option or a stick blender, they are great to blitz up soups, smoothies, desserts, snacks, pancake batters etc.  |
|   | Kettle             | If you need to boil pasta, rice or quinoa and blanch veggies, make these processes faster by pre-boiling the water in a kettle first. Continue to boil in a saucepan on the stovetop.   |
|  | Sharp Knives       | Meal prep is a lot faster if your knives are sharp and ready for action.  |
|  | Pots & Pans        | After each meal-prep session, clean your pots, pans and utensils well and store for their next use. Starting off needing to do a load of dishes and lots of scrubbing isn't fun for anyone!   |
|  | Storage Containers | There's no point prepping loads of meals if you can't store them easily and effectively in the fridge or freezer. You don't need expensive containers just ones that can stack easily and seal well. Zip-lock bags are great for sauces, stews and soups because you can lay them flat in the freezer to store more and they also make defrosting faster. |

FOOD STORAGE 101

WHEN MEAL PREPPING

Prepping your meals and snacks in advance means quicker assembly come meal time. It also means leftovers, which is incredibly helpful in bustling family life. But, with storing foods that have been cooked or prepared, we need to take into consideration how long they can be kept in the fridge or freezer to avoid any food safety issues or sickness. Here are a few rules to follow:

- Cold foods need to be kept below 41°F.
- Frozen foods should be kept below -0.4°F.
- When packing up foods to store, make sure they aren't steaming. Lay them flat in a container to cool quickly (especially important with foods such as rice).
- Don't overcrowd your fridge; ensure there's adequate air flow to cool the foods.
- When storing foods in your refrigerator, store cooked items at the top and raw ones at the bottom.
- Check the fridge each week and throw out any food that should be discarded.
- When you store cooked food as leftovers, they are only to be reheated once.

| Ingredients         | Storage time in the fridge | Comments   |
|---------------------|----------------------------|--|
| COOKED SEAFOOD      | 2 DAYS                     | Store in an airtight container and if you are going to eat cold, this is fine. If you are going to eat hot, make sure you reheat until steaming.   |
| COOKED MEATS        | 2-4 DAYS                   | Store in an airtight container and if you are going to eat cold, this is fine. If you are going to eat hot, make sure you reheat until steaming.   |
| COOKED POULTRY      | 3 DAYS                     | Store in an airtight container and if you are going to eat cold, this is fine. If you are going to eat hot, make sure you reheat until steaming.   |
| COOKED RICE         | 1 DAY                      | It is important with rice that you lay it flat in a container so that it can cool quickly. Rice is susceptible to spore build-up of bacillus cereus which can make you ill. When you are ready to eat it, make sure you heat until steaming. Do not refrigerate any additional leftovers.  |
| COOKED PASTA        | 3 DAYS                     | Store in an airtight container and if you are going to eat cold, this is fine. If you are going to eat hot, make sure you reheat until steaming. Do not refrigerate any additional leftovers.  |
| COOKED MUFFINS      | 5 DAYS                     | This timeline is based more on food quality rather than food safety. The fridge is dehydrating, which dries the product out. These are best stored in the freezer.   |
| CHOPPED RAW VEGGIES | 2 DAYS                     | Surprisingly, veggies that are cut are susceptible to foodborne illness, especially if you are going to eat them as a salad with no further cooking step. The reason diced vegetables in the supermarket keep for longer is because they are often flushed with a gas which stops the growth of organisms. If you are going to cook the veggies, it won't be as much of an issue but it is better to be on the safe side. The quality of the vegetable will also deteriorate because the fridge is dehydrating, which dries the product out. |

| Ingredients     | Storage time in the freezer | Comments  |
| MEAT            | 3-6 MONTHS                  | Meat will store in the freezer for longer than this time, but the quality will be affected by the freezing process. If you are storing raw meat, make sure you place it in the freezer before the use-by date. When you defrost the meat, aim to use it within that 24 hours. It is important when defrosting meat, that it is done safely, either in the fridge or using the microwave. Do not leave it out on the bench.    |
| POULTRY         | 6-12 MONTHS                 | Poultry will store in the freezer for longer than this time, but the quality will be affected by the freezing process. If you are storing raw meat, make sure you place it in the freezer before the use-by date. When you defrost the meat, aim to use it within that 24 hours. It is important when defrosting meat, that it is done safely, either in the fridge or using the microwave. Do not leave it out on the bench. |
| COOKED RICE     | 1-2 MONTHS                  | This timeline is driven by food quality rather than food safety. Rice is susceptible to spore build up of bacillus cereus which can make you ill. When you are ready to eat it, make sure you reheat until steaming.  |
| COOKED PASTA    | 1-2 MONTHS                  | This timeline is driven by food quality rather than food safety.  |
| COOKED MUFFINS  | 2-6 MONTHS                  | This timeline is driven by food quality rather than food safety.  |
| CHOPPED VEGGIES | 1 MONTH                     | This timeline is driven by food quality rather than food safety. Freezing is best for vegetables that will be cooked after defrosting as the structure of the cells have been compromised by the freezing process and will be soggy when defrosted.   |

TIME-SAVING TIPS

AND KITCHEN HACKS

When it comes to preparing quick, healthy meals, there are a few sneaky cooking and kitchen hacks that can be used to save you loads of time.

INGREDIENT PREPARATION

- For recipes like pasta sauces, stews, soups and batters, don't waste time by chopping by hand.. Place ingredients in a food processor and blitz until chunky.
- Make it easier to peel garlic by whacking it hard or squashing it down with the wide edge of a knife. Once it's smashed, the skin just falls off.
- Use a spoon rather than a peeler to remove the skin from fresh ginger. Just scrape a teaspoon over and it will fall off easily.
- You don't always need to peel your veggies. Wash them and keep the peel on for extra fiber.
- Get more juice out of your citrus by rolling them on a bench and pressing as you go.
- When boiling eggs, add some vinegar or baking soda to the water. These ingredients make it easier to peel the eggs once cooked.
- Swap brown rice for quinoa sometimes. Quinoa has a faster cooking time and lots of health benefits.

TIME-SAVING TIPS

LOVE LEFTOVERS

- Get clever with leftovers – make a large batch of veggie-loaded bolognese and have it with spaghetti, then the next day in a wrap with some salad. Freeze some to turn into a base for chili con carne, add to a baked potato or put on top of a homemade pizza.
- Cook extra meat when preparing for dinner and use leftovers the next day in salads or to add to pizzas, tacos, frittatas and omelettes.
- Use an ice cube tray or muffin tin and freeze leftover fresh herbs. Chop the herbs and place into the tray holes with some water, olive oil or stock. Then just defrost the amount you need by popping out of the trays.
- Store leftover nuts in the freezer to extend their shelf life. They can go bad quite quickly in the cupboard.

TIME-SAVING TIPS

AND KITCHEN HACKS

MAKE COOKING A BREEZE

- Rather than having to turn veggies and patties over when baking in the oven, preheat the baking tray before adding the ingredients and the bottoms will start to cook immediately.
- Soak wooden skewers in water for 30 minutes before use to avoid them burning when cooking kebabs.
- Soak a cleaning sponge in water and place it in the microwave on high for a minute. The moisture created will loosen the grime found within the microwave, making it easy to wipe away.
- Have two cutting boards – one for raw meat and the other for everything else. It will help avoid uncooked meat contaminating fresh fruit and vegetables.
- Place a damp tea towel underneath a chopping board to prevent it from sliding around the countertop.

STOCK UP

WITH BASICS

COMMON MISTAKES MADE

☛ DON'T MAKE ALL YOUR WEEKLY MEALS IN ONE DAY

Not only will you find you're a little daunted at preparing a whole week's worth of meals in one day and end up exhausted, but your meals won't taste fresh and you may throw them away for tastier options. Plan 1-2 meal prep sessions a week and in each, choose to prepare a few main meals that can be portioned out and then frozen to enjoy in another week. Plus make a batch of some tasty snacks to enjoy for the first half of the week.

☛ DON'T PREPARE TOO MANY INGREDIENTS THAT CAN'T BE STORED FOR LONG

To avoid food waste (and wasting your money), don't cook a week's worth of chicken in one batch. Follow our fridge and freezer guides to ensure you are storing pre-cooked meals and ingredients correctly. Not only can pre-cooked meat taste a bit stale if prepared too far in advance but you also run the risk of food poisoning if eating ingredients that have been stored for too long.

☛ MIX UP YOUR MEAL PREP RECIPES

It gets very easy to stick to the same schedule of recipes to prepare at every session. This can lead to boredom and wasting your healthy meals. We all need variety when it comes to healthy eating so if hidden veggie bolognese is a family favorite, make a large batch, but freeze in portions so you can include it once a fortnight in your meal plans.

Same with curries, soups and stews – if you make a variety of different recipes on meal prep day in a large batch, you can keep your freezer stocked with different meals so you don't get bored eating the same thing every week.

☛ WATCH OUT FOR INCORRECT STORAGE

Be sure to store your meal prep meals correctly so that they last and are hygienic. Follow our tips in the fridge and freezer guides for how long different meals can be stored and ensure you have proper storage containers. Zip-lock bags are great for sauces, stews and curries as they don't take up much space in the freezer and make defrosting faster when you're ready to eat.

☛ EAT WHAT YOU'VE PREPARED

Many people spend the time meal prepping and then don't eat what they've made, which is a waste of time and money. If you think you're going to get bored with your meal plan for the week, freeze or store what you've already prepared as early as possible, to eat another time. If you get invited out for dinner or to a friend's place for a barbecue at the last minute, freeze your meal for the night as early as possible or store to enjoy the next day.

SAVING MONEY

WHEN MEAL PREPPING

Following a healthy eating plan and then setting aside a few meal prep sessions each week will save you loads of money. Here are some reasons why:

☛ YOU CAN BUY IN BULK

If making meals in larger batches on meal prep days, you can buy ingredients in bulk to save money. Meats and frozen foods are great to buy in bulk, as are flours, rice, grains and other pantry staples. Wholesalers will often sell staples like this direct to the public.

☛ YOU CAN EAT AT HOME

If you have a freezer or fridge loaded with healthy, easy-to-reheat meals, you're less likely to eat out and spend money. Eating out is not always great for your health and not fabulous for your side pocket. The perfect example is pizza. A store-bought pizza can cost more than $15 per pizza. To make at home, it could cost as little as $3 and you can cut out a lot of fat, sugar, salt and artificial preservatives.

☛ YOU CAN AVOID FOOD WASTE

If you've prepared some meals and ingredients in advance and add them to your weekly meal plan, you're less likely to waste ingredients that you haven't had time to cook. Try to buy only what you will use and where possible, buy non-perishable alternatives. Buying frozen saves on waste and is often cheaper. This is especially true for anything not in season.

☛ YOU CAN SHOP ONLINE

Avoid temptations and unnecessary items by shopping online and sticking to your list.

☛ YOU CAN TAKE ADVANTAGE OF SPECIALS BY USING YOUR FREEZER

Purchase ingredients in bulk when they're on sale, store in the freezer and then add these items into your recipes on meal-prep days. For example, when you see ripe tomatoes on sale – grab a bucket or two and make your own tomato sauce. You can then freeze the proceeds in one-cup portions so that you always have pasta sauce at the ready.

SAVE MINUTES MEAL BY MEAL

WHEN MEAL PREPPING

Follow these tips to save time and make meal prep really fast whether you're preparing breakfast, lunch, dinner or snacks.

BREAKFAST TIPS

- ☛ Soak chia seeds overnight in milk in the morning, top with some fresh fruit and you have an easy-to-eat breakfast on the go.
- ☛ Scrambled eggs take no time to cook at all. Use a non-stick frypan and scramble in about 2 minutes. Add to a wholegrain wrap with some baby spinach, avocado, salt and pepper, and wrap up for a savoury breaky burrito.
- ☛ Make your own muesli by combining granola, chopped nuts, dried fruits and seeds, and store in an airtight container in the pantry. Serve with milk, yogurt and sliced fresh fruit and you have a healthy homemade version of packaged cereal.

LUNCH TIPS

- ☛ Making lunch the night before will save you lots of time in the morning if you have to go to work, or in the middle of the day when you're busy.
- ☛ Use a lunchbox with different compartments that you can add a variety of healthy food to, like veggie sticks, fruit, wholegrain crackers, cheese slices, cooked chicken and salad.
- ☛ Make salad the night before and enjoy for lunch with some pre-cooked chicken, canned tuna or salmon. Make a dressing of lemon juice, extra virgin olive oil, salt and pepper, and place in a little container so you can just pour over when ready to eat.
- ☛ Sandwiches and wraps can often go soggy if made too far ahead of time, so place all the components in your lunchbox the night before and store in the fridge so you can just quickly assemble when ready to serve.

DINNER TIPS

- ☛ We've already listed loads of ways you can get prepared for dinner but the main tip that we can't emphasise enough is PREPARE, PREPARE, PREPARE!
- ☛ If you know what you are going to eat, have the ingredients ready to go and have even started part of the preparation process by pre-cooking some ingredients, your time in the kitchen at dinner will be minimal.
- ☛ Leftovers are your best friend after a busy day, so don't be afraid to double the amount of food you make in one kitchen session. Fight the urge to go back for seconds by storing the extras as soon as they're ready to be put away.

SNACK TIPS

- ☛ Have lots of healthy snack options available in the pantry and fridge for easy access.
- ☛ Make larger batches of healthy dips, bliss balls and muffins so you can freeze or refrigerate, to cover you for a whole week of snacks.
- ☛ Freeze fruits like bananas, mango and berries and blitz together in the blender for a delicious and quick, healthy soft serve "ice cream". Great for a sweet treat after dinner.
- ☛ If someone else in your house has a sweet tooth, keep their unhealthy snacks in a different location to help you avoid temptation.
